Getting ready to move out

Leaving home is a big change.

You might feel excited about it.

But you might also feel a bit nervous!

This is normal.

Here are some ideas of what you and your family can do to make things easier:

• you can watch our videos about supported living

• you can read our stories from other people with Down’s syndrome
• you can talk to family and friends who live in their own home

• you can try living away from your family home for a few days

• you can try to learn new things to help be more independent

You might still find it hard when you first move in.

This is OK.

Your support workers, social worker and family are all there to help you.
