Disability Living Allowance DLA (For qualifying children under 16)

- Administered by the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP).
- Not means tested (savings and income don't affect it)
- It consists of 2 parts, the care component and the mobility component.
- DLA care component can be awarded from 3 months of age
- The mobility component can be awarded from 3 years of age.

To qualify for DLA at 3 months, a baby must have current needs, that are over and above those normally needed at this age. Babies with extra medical needs may qualify at this earlier time, examples include tube feeding your baby or administering regular prescribed medication, maybe for their heart or kidneys.

If your baby has no medical issues, they will probably qualify at a later time when they start to show a delay in development. Maybe speech therapy and physiotherapy activities are needed for their development. This need varies with each child. If you are unsure, please call us.

The care component has 3 rates:

- Highest rate (for extra day and night needs) £108.55 weekly
- Middle rate (for extra day or night needs). £72.65 weekly
- The lowest rate is for someone who needs care for around an hour a day whether for a single period or lots of brief single periods. £28.70 (all 2024/5)

If you are awarded DLA for your child, you will be entitled to extra Universal Credit. You will need to let UC know about the award for them to pay this extra amount.

Phone 0800 121 4600 for a claim pack or you can download one from gov.uk.

Personal Independence Payment PIP (For qualifying children and adults 16+)

PIP is for 16 – 65-year-olds. If you get DLA, when your child approaches 16, you will receive a letter inviting you to claim PIP. You will need to request a PIP form at this time, remaining on DLA isn't an option and your award will run out.

If you claim carers allowance, this will carry on if you still satisfy the caring criteria.

PIP is not means tested so savings do not affect it.

You can call 0800 121 4433 for a form

If you are awarded PIP, you will be entitled to extra Universal Credit. You will need to let UC know about the award for them to pay this extra amount.

Attendance Allowance AA (For adults over 65)

AA can be paid to qualifying adults over the age of 65. It is paid to people who are physically or mentally disabled and who need help with personal care or supervision to keep safe.

If you are awarded AA, you will be entitled to extra Universal or pension Credit. You will need to let them know about the award for them to pay this extra amount.

Carers Allowance (if caring for a person receiving DLA, AA or PIP)

You can claim if you are looking after someone claiming DLA middle or highest rate care component, PIP care component or Attendance Allowance.

It is means tested, but only for the carer of the child.

If you decide to work part time, you can earn up to £151 per week (2024/5) - after tax, national insurance contributions and half of any pension payment. Your partner's income will not affect the carers allowance.

If you claim Universal credit, you will receive an addition called carers amount, unlike Carers allowance, there are no earning restrictions.
